

Mahitahi Lodge

south of Glaciers, West Coast

Boutique Accommodation, Fox Glacier

Mahitahi Lodge is situated just south of Fox Glacier next to dramatic Bruce Bay, and surrounded by the magnificent South Westland forest. This boutique accommodation features beautiful native timbers and offers an intimate experience hosted by genuinely local hosts. All guest rooms have ensuite bathrooms complete with heated floors and mirrors, bathrobes, hairdryers and toiletries. Enjoy local cuisine, freshly picked vegetables, fine NZ wines and, when time permits, your host's complimentary interpretation tour of the area. While here take a walk along the beach and view Mt Cook or try fishing in the local river for trout and salmon. The night sky is spectacular with absolutely no "light pollution".

Fox Glacier is just a 30 minute drive north, with multiple options for glacier flights, snow landings and ice hikes and the excellent Lake Mathieson walk and cafe.

An excellent place to stop and explore as you head south or north along one of New Zealand's most spectacular coastlines.

Accommodation

Surrounded by magnificent South Westland landscape, your hosts John and Jacqui have developed a high quality lodge for discerning clientele. To ensure an intimate atmosphere at the lodge, guests are treated like extended family. We pride ourselves on making our guests feel 'at home'. Delight in Jacqui's home cooking and relax in front of a big open fire - the feature of the lodge's open plan kitchen and lounge. The luxury lodge features many of the West Coast's native timbers within its architecture and furniture ensuring a warm and welcoming place to stay.

The three bedrooms (all with ensuites) feature specific native timber from West Coast rain forests.
